(By Associated Press)

Chicago, July 12—A program of the solution of the shopmen's strike was drawn today by Chairman Hooper of the Labor Board, after conferences with leaders of shopmen and was submitted to representatives of the railway executives from the country at a noon conference. It is said to be the result of a phone conversation late last night between W. L. McMenimen, labor member of the board, with President Harding. A promise of executives to receive the shopmen's proposals through Hooper is understood to have been communicated to McMenimen by the president.

Among the questions are a rehearing on the wage issue, changes of over-time pay rules, abolition of "farming out" repair work and the establishment of regional adjustment boards.

Railway executives later said they would give a reply to Hooper's proposals later.

SAYS VETERINARIAN IS REAL NECESSITY

(By Associated Press)

Lexington, Ky., July 12—The veterinary profession is facing a greater problem today than it has ever faced before, Dr. W. M. Cogge, La Center, asserted here today in speaking before the summer meeting of the Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association which is in progress at the College of Agriculture. He added that this problem was the training of veterinary practitioners for future years of service.

He questioned whether young men are going to spend the time and money that is necessary for them to obtain a veterinary degree and then settle down into private practice where they must undergo the hardships brought by empires and competition.

"My solution for eliminating much of this competition is to charge the client a reasonable fee for services rendered and do it in a manner which will impress the client with the fact that the veterinarian is a professional man instead of an emperic or a salaried employee," he said.

"Be sociable with your clients. Treat them as you would have them treat you and invite them to make your office their headquarters while they are in town. Let your office be one that you would not be ashamed to have anyone visit. Such offices are as economical and as easily maintained as the back office of a livery stable which leads people to believe that we are horse doctors instead of veterinarians," he advised the veterinarians.

"The veterinary practitioner is a necessity in every community where domesticated animals are kept; he is the potential force in the protection and development of animal life and is the confidential advisor of the owner of livestock," the speaker continued.

He pointed out that service should be the motto of every practitioner and then added, "With the new discoveries in veterinary science which have been developed within the last decade, we might be led to believe that the veterinary practitioner is relieved of much of the professional worry and responsibility that he has been subjected to recently. As a matter of fact, the practitioner of today requires more skill than ever before."

"I believe the practitioner of the future will have greater opportunities, enjoy greater privileges and find his vocation more desirable than he has in the past," the speaker concluded.

GREAT CROWDS THROUGH DEGARMO MEETING

Sunday was an eventful day for Calvary church. Evangelist DeGarmo preached at the morning hour on the "Resurrection," and made clear many points of interest. In the afternoon he preached to a full house on "Heaven." This was a very tender and impressive service. "Heaven," he declared, "is a prepared place for prepared people. No one can believe the Bible and not believe in Heaven as a place and also believe in hell its antithesis. For the same Bible teaches that there is a heaven and a hell. We will have unlimited knowledge there and certainly we shall know our loved ones in heaven."

At the evening service the church could not accommodate the great throng that came. In addition to the regular pews, chairs were placed in the aisles and in all available space, and yet the crowd could not be seated. Many could not get in the building. Rev. DeGarmo stirred the great audience with his sermon "How Abraham was Saved." This is conceded to be the greatest sermon he has preached yet.

Monday night the house was full again and the evangelist preached on "The court of royal condemnation." This sermon was a court scene. The text was: "He that believeth on Him is not condemned; but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed on the name of the only begotten son of God." Jo. 3:18. No saved man will ever be tried in this court but every unsaved man must face his trial there. In this court of courts Jesus Christ will be the judge and shall meet out just judgment. In that court there will be no injustice, no misunderstanding the law, no escape of justice, no bribery of the jurors, and there is no such thing as an unbeliever getting beyond the jurisdiction of that court. In the form of a dialogue he called forth the witnesses for the state or prosecution, which were: Imagination, memory, conscience, and will-power. These all bore testimony against the defendant who had not believed on Jesus Christ. Then he read the law, the Ten Commandments, which the defendant had not kept. Then he called forth witnesses for the defendant who were his brother, his father, his mother, his wife, his daughter. All these testified that he was a good man, but they knew nothing of his believing in Christ. And lastly, the defendant testified for himself.

On Thursday morning the subject will be "Scriptural Church." This is a live and vital subject and it is hopeful many will hear it. Beginning on Wednesday evening he will preach on Jo. 3:16 each evening throughout the remainder of the meeting; a series of fine sermons on "For God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth on him shall not perish, but have everlasting life." Jo. 3:16. This is the heart of the gospel and large crowds are expected to hear these sermons.

BIG TENT CITY IS PREPARED FOR CORBIN

L. & N. To Send 700 Men There To Operate Shops and Will Have Guards For Men

Establishment of a tent camp at Corbin to accommodate approximately 700 men required to operate the railroad shops there, was announced Tuesday in a public statement by Wible L. Mapother, president of the Louisville & Nashville railroad, says the Louisville Times. The camp is now being prepared for the workers who will be sent there in short time, Mr. Mapother stated. Guards to protect the workers will also be sent.

While the situation at Corbin, described as a pivotal transportation point on the system, has been comparatively quiet, Mr. Mapother stated, the shops have been unable to operate, and the quiet had been obtained at the price of stifling the railway service. Mr. Mapother stated that practically all of the business houses and officers of the city are strike sympathizers and that the railroad has even been refused supplies.

Open declarations that they will not permit others to take the places of the 686 men on strike have been made by strikers and their sympathizers, and the men who are to be sent there are to be protected, but with instructions not to start violence.

The procedure, Mr. Mapother stated, was not due to ill-will toward the strikers. It is the opinion of the railroad, he said, that they have been misled, and action has been delayed in the hope that they would return to work. At present there are fifty dead engines in the yard there, and 99 per cent of the coal cannot move, he said.

Unless certain towns and communities in which Louisville and Nashville railroad shops are located furnish protection to men working in the shops in the place of strikers the shops will be moved to other localities where facilities for doing the work are equally good.

Corbin Paper Tells About Strike There

(From Corbin Times)

Saturday morning at 10 o'clock 1,800 men employed in the round houses and by the mechanical department of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, laid down their tools and walked out. The strike situation, inasmuch as Corbin is concerned, remains unchanged. Since the walkout last Saturday none of the shop men have returned to work.

Forty-three men were brought in Sunday by the company, but more than half left the same day, following a conference with the strikers, who say that they were brought in under the impression that they were to be employed as guards but were later asked by the company to go to work in the shops. It is reported that at present only five or six men are working at the roundhouse.

Not more than ten per cent of the usual business is being done through the Corbin yards and disabled cars are piling up on the local shop tracks.

We are informed that various coal mines throughout this section are either shutting down or slackening up on account of not being able to get their product to market. Corbin being the gateway through which the principal business of the L. & N. railroad must come, it is considered one of the most important strike centers and was visited at various times during the week by the chief rail officials and the chairmen of the brakemen, conductors, shop, firemen and engineer's unions.

The men who walked out Saturday have never at any time exhibited any signs of violence or boisterous conduct. They have gone about their business, meeting each day in the Hippodrome theatre, and spending the remainder of their time with their families and off the street.

The business men have lined up behind the striking shop men and practically every business house in the city bears a card warning scabs and strike breakers that their business is not solicited nor their presence wanted. Public sentiment, which a year ago would have been against the strikers, is now overwhelmingly in their favor, as many people
